Introduction

To put it in transcendent terms, humanism applied to science is a revolutionary and far from abstract concept. It assigns to scientific and technical studies the value of a holistic education – where intellect is intertwined with spirituality, emotion, physicality, and sociality – as well as cultural formation.

What better occasion to embody this vision than an Advanced Training Course, one that merges the epistemological rigor of today with the still-unexplored yet already-dreamed possibilities of tomorrow.
